

INTERNATIONAL ACTIVITY:

Linda Davis participated in the KU International Faculty Development Seminar in Cuba June 1 to 8, 2004. She visited the University of Havana journalism program.

Tom Volek taught in Vologda, Russia and conducted workshops for journalism deans in Northwest Russia and the Baltic States September 26-October 11. He returned to teach law, history and ethics in a new journalism program at Petrozavodsk State University March 13 to April 3, and to observe Russian elections.

Kerry Benson taught in the fall and David Guth in the spring at the Consortium International University in Paderno del Grappa, Italy. The School has offered classes there since fall 2000. Terry Bryant will teach in fall 2004, and Patty Noland will teach in spring 2005.

Byung-suc Cha, a reporter on the Korea Economic Daily, studied at the School as the Sungkok Foundation Fellow.

Nurjigit Kadyrbekov, an assistant professor of law at Osh State University in Kyrgyzstan, was a visiting fellow at the School this year. He is continuing next year.

Two young Arab journalists spoke in classes in September.

Professor Kattia Pierre, a master's graduate of the School, and three of her students at the University of Costa Rica spent a month at the School.